CIRCUIT COURT HAD SHORT SESSION

TWO PLEAD GUILTY AND ARE PAROLED.

Jury Acquits Isaac Jendron Charged With Resisting Officer.

Judge Guy E. Smith opened the October term of Circuit court for Crawford county Tuesday afternoon and proceeded at once to go over the calendar.

Orel Turner, being charged with violation of the prohibition law entered a plea of guilty and was released on probation for one year.

Abe Jarells, charged with a like offense, also pleaded guilty and was released upon his own recognition, to appear at the next term of Circuit court.

The case of Isaac Jendron, charged with resisting an officer, was the greatest attraction of the court this session. He pleaded not guilty and was tried by a jury. Prosecuting attorney Fitch represented the People and Attorney Ross of West Branch defended the prisoner. Village Marshal Mike Brenner was the complaining witness and stated that about 3 o'clock Sunday morning, October 2 he was sitting in Cody's restaurant eating a lunch when the accused, Isaac Jendron, came into the place in an intoxicated condition, and used profane language. That he cautioned Jendron to cease such talk and to go home and go to bed. The latter did not do so. During the talk a bottle said to contain whisky slipped from Jendron's pocket and fell to the floor. The officer recognized the contents of the bottle and immediately placed Jendron under arrest. Then, he says Jendron hit him in the face with his fist. The officer says that he called for help and Jendron was over-powered and taken to jail. His testimony was substantiated by Constable Alvin LaChappelle, who helped him to make the arrest. Several witnesses swore that they were present but did not see Jendron strike the officer. At the time he was arraigned in Justice court, Justice Fred Alexander warned Jendron that anything he might say at this time could be held against him in the higher court, but after this warning he stated he was guilty—guilty of the offense of assault and battery against M. Brenner, or resisting an officer. The jury, after being out a couple of hours, brot in a verdict of not guilty.

Prosecuting Attorney Fitch made a very able prosecution of the case. Attorney Ross of West Branch, who defended the accused, deserves to be commended for his excellent defense. His work was really masterful, and he won a case which did not appear to have a single chance in the world. Everything pointed that the accused was guilty as charged, and to win in such a case deserved special comment at this time. The jury must have been fully convinced that Jendron did not resist the officer and when arrested went peacefully along to jail.

The case of Peter Reuter vs. Bruce Weber, assumpst, was continued to next term.

A judgment was granted in favor of the plaintiffs in the case of the Chatfield Grain & Milling Company vs. William Mosher.

The divorce cases of Lucile Hahn vs. Loyd N. Hahn, and of Bessie M. Richardson vs. Alba Richardson, were continued to next term of court.

HOW BUREAU WORK HAS BEEN FITTED N. E. MICHIGAN.

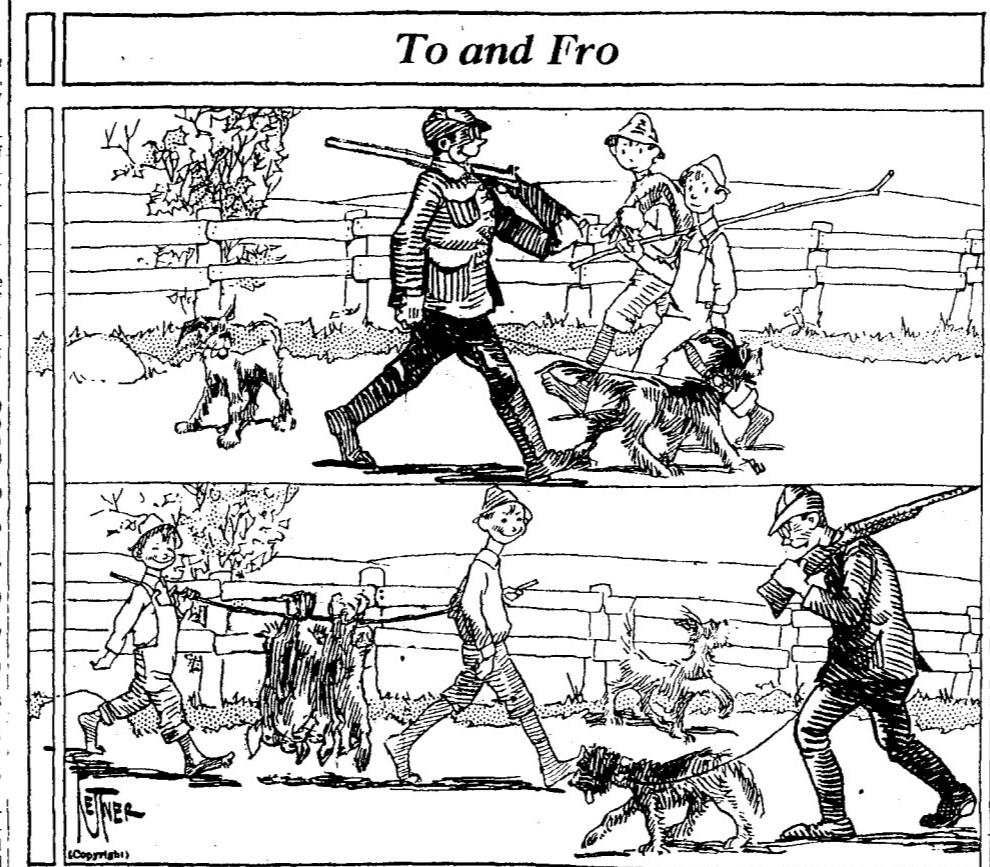

The board of supervisors of the counties belonging to the North-Eastern Michigan Development Bureau will all be asked to make their appropriations for the support of the bureau at the October sessions which begin this week.

It has taken a bulletin issued by the United States census department to show a part of what the bureau has accomplished for its territory in the past 10 years. It is a fact known to every newspaper reader that throughout the country, and especially in Michigan, the exodus from the farms to the cities has resulted, as a rule, in decreased population in agricultural counties.

Throughout the lower peninsula of Michigan, this decrease was general, except in Northern Michigan, and in a few counties having large manufacturing institutions, where the overflow from the cities into villages adjacent to the factory towns, is counted as "agricultural" population but consists of factory workers.

In other words, of the fifteen counties in the whole lower peninsula which are credited with an increase in agricultural population six are actually agricultural counties located in Northeastern Michigan, and the others, with the single exception, are counties in which large manufacturing cities are located.

The work of the development bureau in advertising the possibilities of the various counties is what has

The lights of the school are again working order.

Men will go back to there boyhood days again, and play indoor base ball Monday night in the Gym.

The school yard looks like the Assembly room. Well kept in sections.

The students are very careful this year so far, only an expensive barometer has been broken.

Gee, we certainly like to see the flowers in the few rooms that have them. It beautifies on the outside as well as the inside.

The beginning classes in the foreign languages are very large this year. The Latin I class is very much interested in finding out how many English words are derived from the older tongue. A growing realization of the real value of Latin as a help to a better understanding of our own language is thus brought about.

Listen to This!

Miss Bellon in 10 A English class:

Name the different kinds of nouns.

Emerson Brown: "Proper and Improper."

Archie Cripps in Physical training class: "Shall I mark time with my feet?"

Morrow: "Did you ever hear of marking time with your hands?"

A. C.: "Yes sir. Clocks do it."

Ruby Olson, teacher of Sixth grade heard one of her pupils say, "I ain't going there." She explained that it wasn't good English, and began to give examples and explanation, such as "I am not going, they are not going, he is not going, they are not going." Now do you understand?" said Ruby.

"Yes ma'am, I gets it alright. They ain't nobody going."

The Freshmen had a marshmallow roast last Friday night.

The Green Stuff was well watered.

We wonder if we will ever get rid of the old green stage curtain.

The Lyceum course. What is it? Where is it? Don't be impatient. Next week there will be a lot of information.

We want some school spirit. Some doubt that we have any. LET'S SHOW THEM.

BOARDERS AND ROOMERS WANTED.

We have clean, warm, steam heated rooms to offer the public, and assure all who come here that they will be comfortable and satisfied.

Also our cafe is now in operation. This place will appeal to anyone wanting lunches or meals and also as a regular boarding place.

Farm Bureau Notes

R. D. BAILEY

County Agricultural Agent

What Next.

The County Agent is busy now throughout the county on four things:

(1) Urging to sow rye as cover crop.

(2) Urging careful selection of seed corn.

(3) Urging hill selection of next year's seed potatoes.

(4) Testing soil with the Farm Bureau Truog soil tester.

Pieric Acid.

Chance to save more than your Farm Bureau dues.

The government had millions of pounds of Pieric Acid left after the war. This is being given to the farmers, the only cost being for putting into cartridges and boxes, seven cents a pound plus three or four cents a pound freight. It comes in 100 lb. boxes. Government will not bother with less than car load lots.

I have a chance to go in with the county agent of another county if we act at once. Those who get it will have to do so this fall.

Pieric Acid is a safer explosive than dynamite. A six ounce cartridge about equals an eight ounce cartridge dynamite. Will cost the farmer about one-third as much. Use it like dynamite. Use number 8 caps. On each pound save twenty cents. On fifty, save $10 your yearly dues to farm bureau. Get a 100 lb. box with your neighbor. Don't plow around stumps. You have to use an application blank. If you want write me, or call at office, or telephone, and I will send it at once.

In vast regions in the New England states every farm is run with the purpose of producing feed for wintering every possible cow.

It should be so here. Why fool along with three or four cows? The farm should be speeded up to carrying 12 to 20 cows. It is perfectly possible, and is the only reasonable thing to do.

If a farm here kept 3 cows one winter, it should keep 5 the next; 7 the next, and so on, until 12 to 20 are the regular business of that farm. No use to say: "I am too poor."

A hustler can increase his herd by 2 cows a year, if he wants to. Taxes will not increase in proportion to this increase in income.

Not failure but low aim is crime.

Daily Market Report.

Have you sent to Bureau of Markets, Houseman Block, Grand Rapids, Mich., for your copy of the daily market report on white potatoes?

Getting that report may save enough to buy a cow.

We farmers must help ourselves.

In other lines of business they keep keenly posted on the markets. We farmers too often say: "I don't read much; too busy."

All right! As we make our bed we must sleep in it."

Second Fiddle.

Farmers have played second fiddle all through the ages, because they just worked and growled, and pinched along.

A strange change seems to be rapidly taking place.

Legislature and Congress seem very prompt the last year to consider the rights and needs of agriculture. Why?

Was it because you and I scared them?

It is because farmers are organizing into County Farm Bureaus; then these into State Farm Bureaus; then these into National Farm Bureaus, with suitable committees to confer with the proper committees of the Legislature and of Congress.

The words below are very important to every Crawford County Farmer.

Investment Must Precede Dividend.

The farmers in Michigan are closing the greatest year in their history. The peak of membership organization enthusiasm has been reached and passed.

When his plowing is done, just as the ground is frozen for the winter, his barnyard, henhouse, and pigpen will be clean and valuable fertilizer placed where it ought to be.

Next!

On a lot of our farms, after the weather will not permit plowing, clearing up some land ought to go on until stopped by snow.

Clearing up land of brush and stumps ought to go forward on a lot of farms in the spring before the farming season opens.

If this is done and excuses not made for not doing it, more farmers could raise more feed, to keep more cows, to ship more cream, to take in more money.

Seven Cans.

The other day we were in the depot at Roscommon. We saw seven cans of cream there to be shipped. We like the gumption of the people who ship seven cans; but what good reason is there to prevent it being 17 on five million trout eggs and Mr. Zalsman is making arrangements by making more hatchery troughs to handle six million or more. SUNSHADES FOR LUCKY DOGS

Innovation That Was Brought About

by the Protracted Spell of Unusually Hot Weather.

One of the quaintest innovations of the recent heat wave in London was the introduction of sunshades for dogs. These consisted of light crepe-de-chine protections suspended over the animals' necks by light wire strands.

The "lucky" animals whose masters or mistresses bought the sunshades did not seem so pleased with them as perhaps the donors had hoped, remarked London Answers.

One dog found the heat so oppressive that he sought the shelter of a railway tunnel on the Highbury tube. Here he was, however, so frightened by the continual passing of trains that he shrank into a dark corner and remained there for two days, until his master, on the information of a railway man, fetched him.

Although sunshades for dogs made their first appearance, there was a strange absence of the straw hats that horses used to wear before the war. Horse hats have so hardened by the great campaign that they do not need the consideration that dogs get?

CONDENSED CLASSICSMIDSHIPMAN EASY

By CAPTAIN MARRYAT

Condensation by James B. Connolly

Frederick Marryat was born in 1782 and lived until 1855. His father was an Englishman of wealth who sat in parliament and was a writer of verse and political pamphlets. The author, however, died in his veins, and even before he was allowed to enter the navy at fourteen he had made a numerous number of visits to his favorite element. He served under Lord Cochrane in the famous Impeachment and at once began to lay the foundation of that inexhaustible store of knowledge and experience which made him the prince of story tellers of the sea. The daring Lord Cochrane was an admirable master during two and a half years he showed his young midshipmen some 50 engagements and bold enterprises of every sort. And the latter was not the only one, for there were many other extremely daring. Honorable mention came his way frequently; in 1818 he received the medal of the Humane Society for "at least a dozen" gallant rescues; he invented a code of signals; he became a Fellow of the Royal Society.

He began his series of 24 books with "Frank Mildmay" in 1829, and kept them going for 20 years, to the delight of an expectant public. As happened in the case of so many writers included in this series of one hundred books, instant success came to one who had to fight his way to fame. "Frank Mildmay," "Easy," "Snarleyow," and all the rest of the dozen tales hold a thrill for whoever loves the sea.

M. R. EASY was for natural equality and the rights of man, which Mrs. Easy did not mind, she being allowed to have her patient of patience. Behold then a contented couple to whom, after eleven years of married life, was born our hero Jack. For nurse to the baby the family doctor introduced a strong, healthy young woman. Mrs. Easy, catechising her, was horrified. "What—not married! And you had a child!"

"If you please, ma'am, it was such a little one!"

The young woman joined the Easy household, where she aided every other member there to spoil young Jack; and so we have at five years of age a complete specimen of the headstrong young male. To save him from utter ruin, the family doctor urged that he be sent to a school which he could highly recommend. The parents agreed, but with the proviso from Mr. Easy that he must not be flogged.

The benevolent-looking master of this school was against flogging also. Caring, in his judgment, more efficacious; so without troubling to tell Mr. Easy of it, he caned our hero beautifully. Thus, when at fourteen Jack came home to live, all the bully was gone from him. In place thereof was a great disposition to argue things, with natural equality and the rights of man as his favorite themes.

Two disputatious people under one roof were too many. Jack's father packed him off to sea to H. M. sloop Harpy, where he very soon learned that the natural equalities were not in high favor. If he was not towed ashore on a grating by a court-martial order for some of his socially aristocratic opinions when his ship arrived at Gibraltar, it was probably because the captain of H. M. S. Harpy was indebted to Jack's father for the loan of 1,000 pounds.

Jack's radical opinions did not lessen his naval zeal. As midshipman in command of the ship's second cutter in a certain expedition he ignored the recall signal and so lost sight of his own ship; but losing sight of her led to the capture of a fine big enemy ship; and among this ship's passengers was a lovely Italian girl, whom Jack treated with great courtesy, even to seeing her safely ashore in a nearby port.

Being the only officer in his force it was Jack's duty to navigate the prize back to Gibraltar. "Simple enough," he said. "The land was on our left hand coming out, it should be on our right hand going back;" and he was doing pretty well on that theory when a gale of wind came along and blew him out of sight of land.

In the course of their prize the crew had found some casks of wine, to which they helped themselves, and, coming to a group of islands where Jack put in to reconnoiter his navigation, they went ashore and got gloriously drunk. Their wine gave out. They haled the ship for more. Jack said no. They set out to swim to the ship after it, but sharks caught three of them; the others returned aboard on Jack's terms.

Jack sailed his prize over pretty much the whole Mediterranean before he found his own ship again. He had been gone two months. But such a story as he had to tell! and $14,000 he found in the cabin of the prize helped out the telling of it. His captain commended him, but also advised him.

Water Power There.

A survey, recently made of the available water power in the Dutch Indies, shows that this amounts to a million horsepower.

Tinted Literature.

Rat Always Feared.

Scientists have pointed out that the agency of the rat in the dissemination of plague was well known in ancient times. Our ancestors carefully protected, and, when possible, domesticated the natural enemies of the rat and even deified some of the more useful ones, as the cat, the kestrel and the cobra. They made special use of rat-eating species of snakes, keeping great numbers of these harmless snakes in pits in their medical temples.

ALONG the MEXICAN BORDER

eastern states. Windmills are everywhere—"big electric fans to keep the cattle cool," a waggon cowboy once explained to a London tenderfoot.

El Paso ("The Pass"), great border mart of west Texas, is set on the edge of a rich stretch of the Rio Grande valley. It stands at the point of intersection between two old highways, the first channels of traffic established by white men in America. It is the only large city from "San Antonio" to Los Angeles, a ride of 1,500 dry, dusty miles. It is well served by both American and Mexican railways, and its merchants buy and sell goods for hundreds of miles below the Rio Grande. Despite the arid country about it and its occasional blinding dust-storms, its climate is exceptionally good, owing to high elevation.

In many ways the social cleavage of this border is sharp and startling. It cuts us off abruptly from another people, showing an odd, interesting cross-section of diverse civilizations.

For all the people along this line either Yankees or Mexicans. Thousands of Chinese are settled there on the Mexican side; and beside them are Turks and Japanese, and 20 Indian tribes speaking 20 of the babel of tongues heard in Mexico.

Thousands of settlers migrate to this borderland each year, losing themselves in the vast, hazy-blue stretches of its open country; but they are Americans all, mostly from the Middle West and the South. The hordes of Finns, Slavs and Neapolitans that pour into our Atlantic ports never get this far; they stop in the manufacturing centers of the East. In Texas and California, of course, native-born generations are found; in the newer states of Arizona and New Mexico most of the residents (baring children) have come from other states.

Rough and Difficult Trip.

Adventurous, colorful and full of contrast as it is, the 1,800-mile trip along this crooked historic line is rough and difficult and has been made by few people.

Some of the wildest and least known regions of our country are piled up against this border. Ask any doughboy of the many, many thousands who have done a "bitch" on the Mexican border, what he thinks, for instance, of Ajo or the Yuma sector.

In the San Bernardino valley the line strikes the first running water after quitting the Rio Grande—192 miles to the east. In the whole 700-mile stretch from the Rio Grande to the Pacific this line crosses only five permanent running streams, and the average rainfall throughout its length is only eight inches. Save the hamlets of Columbus and Hatchita, the New Mexico section of the border is almost uninhabited.

Hurding this line in pursuit of Geomino and his Apaches was for years favorite outdoor army sport in these parts; but nowadays most ambitious residents are mining copper, roping and branding cattle or fussing with irrigation ditches.

Then, too, there is the ever-recurring problem of dividing the waters of the river for irrigating purposes. Around such places as Laredo, Tex., this situation affords many an acrimonious international argument.

No spot on the whole border affords more of impressive grandeur than the region about the mouth of the Pecos. This yellow, turbulent stream runs into the Rio Grande near the town of Del Rio, forming along the bottom a steep-walled canyon worn hundreds of feet deep in the solid rock.

Relic of Camel Experiment.

At the old fort at Camp Verde, north of Verde, in a reef of one of the oldest experiments ever made by our government. It is an Arab khan, in ruins now, but in its time an exact replica of the rectangular adobe caravansaries built along such caravan trails as that from Bagdad to Teheran. This khan was built back in 1850, when Jefferson Davis was secretary of war and the famous experiment was made with camels for army transport use between Texas and California.

As you follow the border west, oaks, pines and underbrush decrease, aridity increases, and cacti lift their thorny heads. Cattle, goats and sheep are pastured in large numbers; but, except for irrigated areas along the river, the country is thinly settled and undeveloped. Border counties like Brewster, Presidio and El Paso are of amazing area—larger than some of our small

Important to all Women
Readers of this Paper

Thousands upon thousands of women have kidney or bladder trouble and never suspect it.

Women's complaints often prove to be nothing else but kidney trouble, or the result of kidney or bladder disease.

The kidneys are not in a healthy condition; they may cause the other organs to become diseased.

You may suffer pain in the back, headache and loss of ambition.

Poor health makes you nervous, irritable and may be despondent; it makes you one so.

But hundreds of women claim that Dr. Kilmer's Swamp Root, by restoring health to the kidneys, proved to be just the remedy needed to overcome such conditions.

Many send for a sample bottle to see what Swamp Root, the great kidney, liver and bladder medicine will do for them. By enclosing ten cents to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Hinghamton, N. Y., you may receive sample size bottles by Parcel Post. You can purchase medium and large size bottles at all drug stores.—Advertisement.

TAKES CARE
OF 5 CHILDREN

Mrs. Taylor's Sickness Ended
by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Roxbury, Mass.—"I suffered continually with backache and was often despondent, had dizzy spells and at my monthly periods it was almost impossible to keep around me at work. Since my last baby came two years ago my back has been worse and no position I could get in would relieve it, and doctor's medicine did not help me. Afried recommended Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and I have found great relief since using it. My back is much better and I can sleep well. I keep house and have the care of five children so my work is very trying and I am very thankful I have found the Compound such a help. I recommend it to my friends and if you wish to use this letter I am very glad to help any woman suffering as I was until I used Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound."—Mrs. MAUDE E. TAYLOR, 5 St. James Place, Roxbury, Mass.

Backache is one of the most common symptoms of a displacement or derangement of the female organs. No woman should make the mistake of trying to overcome it by heroic endurance, but profit by Mrs. Taylor's experience and try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

It's Soliloquy," Othello's Speech to the Senate," Marc Anthony's Address" and a part of "Webster's Reply to Hayne." A man came along the other day and sold him a barrel of rubbish for two bits. In it he found a volume of "Blackstone's Commentaries." Old Blackstone challenged him to a wrestle and Abe has grappled with him. I reckon he'll take his measure as easily as he took Jack Armstrong's. Late he has got possession of a noble asset. It is "The Cotter's Saturday Night," by Robert Burns. I propose to ask him to let us share his enjoyment of this treasure."

Abe, who had been sitting with his legs doubled beneath him on a buffalo skin, between Joe and Betsey Traylor, rose and said:

"Mr. Kelso's remarks, especially the part which applied to me, remind me of the story of the prosperous grocer of Joliet. One Saturday night he and his boys were busy selling sausages. Suddenly in came a man with whom he had quarreled and laid two dead cats on the counter.

"There," said he, "this minkes seven today, I'll call Monday and get my money."

"We were doing a good business here making fun. It seems a pity to ruin it and throw suspicion on the quality of the goods by throwing a cat on the counter."

"That," said he, "this minkes seven today, I'll call Monday and get my money."

"We were doing a good business here making fun. It seems a pity to ruin it and throw suspicion on the quality of the goods by throwing a cat on the counter."

"It is," said Samson. "What can I do for you?"

THE SLAVES.

Synopsis.—Samson and Sarah Taylor with their two children, John and Betsey, travel by wagon from their home in Vergennes, Vt., to the West, the land of plenty. They stop at the town of the Conquistadores, the Spaniards in Illinois. At Nauvoo Falls they meet John McNeil, who also decides to go to the Spanish country. Samson's wife saves the life of Harry Needles, in the last stages of fever, and he accompanies the Taylors. They reach Alton, Ill., and are welcomed by young Abe Lincoln. Jack Kels and his pretty daughter Bim, sixteen years old, and others, soon decide to stay and raise their cabin. Led by Jack Armstrong, rowdies make trouble. Lincoln invites Armstrong, Harry Needles and John McNeil. Harry is attacked by McNeil and his gang, and Bim drives them off with a shotgun. John McNeil and his wife, Ann Rutledge, are in love with Bim, but has never had enough courage to tell her so. Harry loves Bim.

CHAPTER V.—Continued.

John McNeil kissed Ann Rutledge that evening and was most attentive to her, and the women were saying that the two had fallen in love with each other.

"See how she looks at him," one of them whispered.

"Well, it's just the way he looks at her," the other answered.

At the first pause in the merriment Kelso stood on a chair, and then silence fell upon the little company.

"My good neighbors," he began, "we are here to rejoice that new friends have come to us and that a new home is born in our midst. We bid them welcome. They are big-boned, big-hearted folks. No man has grown large who has not at one time or another had his feet in the soft and felt its magic power going up into his blood and bone and sinew. Here is a wonderful soil and the inspiration of wide horizons; here are broad and fertile fields. Where the corn grows high you can grow statesmen. It may be that out of one of these little cabins a man will come to carry the torch of Liberty and Justice so high that his light will shine into every dark place. So let no one despise the cabin—humble as it is. Samson and Sarah Taylor, I welcome and congratulate you. Whatever may come, you can find no better friends than these, and of this you may be sure, no child of the prairies will ever go about with a hard heart or a monkey. Our friend, Honest Abe, is one of the few rich men in this neighborhood. Among his assets are 'Kirkin's Grammar,' 'The Pilgrim's Progress,' the 'Lives of Washington and Henry Clay.'

"We have been longing for news from home, but not a word has come from you. It don't seem as if we could stand it unless we hear from you or some of the folks once in a while. We are not dead just because we are a thousand miles away. We want to hear from you. Please write and let us know how father and mother are and all the news. We have all been sick with the fever and ague. It is a beautiful country and the soil is very rich, but there is some sickness. Samson and I were both sick at the same time. I never knew Samson to give up before. He couldn't go on, his head ached so. Little Joe helped me get the fire started and brought some water and waited on us. Harry Needles had gone away to Springfield for Mr. Offutt with a drove of hogs. Two other boys are with him. He is going to buy a new suit. He is a very proud boy. Joe and Betsey got back with the doctor at nine. That night Abe Lincoln came and sat up with us and gave us our medicine and kept the fire going. It was comical to see him lying beside Joe in his trundle bed, with his long legs sticking over the end of it and his feet standing on the floor about a yard from the bed. He was spread all over the place. He talked about religion and his views would shock most of our friends in the East. He doesn't believe in the kind of Heaven that the ministers talk about or any eternal hell. He says that nobody knows anything about the hereafter, except that God is a kind and forgiving father and that all men are His children. He says that we can only serve God by serving each other. He seems to think that every man, good or bad, black or white, rich or poor, is his brother. He thinks that Henry Clay, next to Daniel Webster, is the greatest man in the country. He is studying hard. Expects to go out and make speeches for Clay next summer. He is quite severe in his talk against General Jackson. He and Samson agree in politics and religion. They are a good deal alike. He is very fond of Samson and Harry—calls them his partners. We have this big awkward giant. His feet are set in the straight way and we think that he is going to make his mark in the world.

"You said you would come out next spring to look about. Please don't disappoint us. I think it would almost break my heart. I am counting the days. Don't be afraid of fever and ague. Sapington's pills cure it in three or four days. I would take the steamboat at Pittsburg, the roads in Ohio and Indiana are so bad. You can get a steamer up the Illinois river at Alton and get off at Beardstown and drive across country. If we knew when you were coming Samson or Abe would meet you. Give our love to all the folks and friends."

"Yours affectionately,

"Sarah and Samson."

It had been a cold winter and not easy to keep comfortable in the little house. In the worst weather Samson had used to get up at night to keep the fire going. Late in January a wind from the southeast melted the snow and warmed the air of the midlands so that, for a week or so, it seemed as if spring were come. One night of this week Sambo awoke the family with his barking. A strong wind was rushing across the plains and roaring over the cabin and walling in its chimney. Suddenly there was a rap on its door. When Samson opened it he saw in the moonlight a young colored man and woman standing near the doorstop.

"Is dis Mistah Traylor?" the young man asked.

"It is," said Samson. "What can I do for you?"

"Mast' de good Lord done fatched us here to ask you to 'help,' said the negro. "We be high wone out with cold un' hungah, suh, 'deed we be."

Samson asked them in and put wood on the fire and Sarah got up and made some hot tea and brought food from the cupboard and gave it to the strangers, who sat shivering in the firelight. They were a good-looking pair, the young woman being almost white. They were man and wife. The latter stopped eating and moaned and shook with emotion as her husband told their story. Their master had died the year before and they had been brought to St. Louis to be sold in the slave market. There they had escaped by night and gone to the house of an old friend of their former owner who lived north of the city on the river shore. He had taken pity on them and brought them across the Mississippi and started them on the north road with a letter to Elijah Lovejoy of Alton and a supply of food. Since then they had been hiding days in the swamps and thickets and had traveled by night. Mr. Lovejoy had sent them to Erastus Wright of Springfield, and Mr. Wright had given them the name of Samson Traylor and the location of his cabin. From there they were bound for the house of John Peasley in Hopetown, Tazewell county.

Lovejoy had asked them to keep the letter with which they had begun their travels. The letter stated that their late master had often expressed his purpose of leaving them their freedom when he should pass away. He had left no will and since his death the two had fallen into the hands of his nephew, a despotic, violent young drunkard of the name of Biggs.

Samson was so moved by their story that he hitched up his horses and put some hay in the wagon box and made off with the fugitives up the road to the north in the night. When daylight came and has an answer ready every time."

For details of the remainder of the historic visit of Samson Traylor to the home of John Peasley we are indebted to a letter from John to his brother Charles, dated February 21, 1832. In this he says:

"We had gone out to the barn and Brimstead and I were helping Mr. Traylor hitch up his horses. All of a sudden two men came riding up the road at a fast trot and turned in and come straight toward us and pulled up by the wagon. One of them was a slim, red-cheeked young fellow about twenty-three years old. He wore top boots and spurs and a broad-brimmed black hat and gloves and a fur waistcoat and party linen. He looked at the tires of the wagon and said: 'That's the one we've followed.'

"'Which o' you is Samson Traylor?'

"'I am,' said Traylor.

"The young fellow jumped off his horse and tied him to the fence. Then he went up to Traylor and said: "What did you do with my niggers, you dirty sucker?"

"Men from Missouri hated the Illinois folks then days and called 'em Suckers."

"Hain't you a little reckless, young fellow?" Traylor said, as cool as a cucumber. "He stood up nigh the barn door, which Brimstead had closed after we backed the wagon out."

"The young fellow stepped close to the New Salem man and raised his whip for a blow. Quick as lightning Traylor grabbed him and threw him in the barn door, keewack! He hit so hard the boards bent and the whole barn roared and trembled. The other fellow tried to get his pistol out of its holster, but Brimstead, who stood beside him, grabbed it, and I got his hose by the bits and we both held on. The young fellow lay on the ground shakin' as if he had the ague. Ye never see a man so spittin in a second. Traylor picked him up. His right arm was broke and his face and shoulder bruised some. Yed'a thought a steam engine had blown up while he was puttin' wood in it. He was kind o' limp and the mad had leaked out of him."

"I reckon I better find a doctor," he says.

"You get into my wagon and I'll take ye to a good one," says Traylor.

"Just then Stephen Nickles, the circuit minister, rode in with the big bloodhound that follows him around. "The other slaver had got off his horse in the scrummizze. Traylor started for him. The slaver began to back away and suddenly broke into a run. The big dog took after him with a kind of a lion roar. We all began yelling at the dog. We made more noise than you'd hear at the end of a horse race. It scared the young fellow. He put on more steam and went up the ladder to the roof of the woodshed like a chased weasel. The dog stood barkin' as if he had trod a bear. Traylor grabbed the ladder and pulled it down.

"You stay till I get away an' you'll be safe," said he.

"The man looked down and swore and shook his fist and threatened us with the law.

"Mr. Nickles rode close to the woodshed and looked up at him.

"My brother, I fear you're not a Christian," he said.

"He swore at the minister. That settled him. I reckon he better stay till till he gets a little of God's grace in his soul," says the minister.

"As Samson drew near the house he observed a man working on the roof of a woodshed. Something familiar in his look held the eye of the New Salem man. In half a moment he recognized the face of Henry Brimstead. It was now a cheerful face. Brimstead came down from the ladder and they shook hands.

"Good land o' Goshen! How did you get here?" Samson asked. Brimstead answered:

"Through the help of a fellow that looks like you an' the gift of a pair o' horses. Come down this road early in September on my way to the land o' plenty. Found Peasley here. Couldn't help it. Saw his name on the barn. Used to go to school with him in Orwell. He offered to sell me some land with a house on it an' trust me for his pay. I liked the looks o' the country and so I didn't go no further. I was goin' to write you a letter, but I hadn't got around to it yet. Abe forgot what you done for us, I can tell ye that."

"Well, this looks better than the sand plains—a lot better—and you look better than the flea farmer back in York state. How are the children?"

"Fat an' happy an' well dressed.

Mrs. Peasley had been a mother to 'em an' her sister is goin' to be a wife to me."

He came close to Samson and added in a confidential tone: "Say, if I was any happier I'd be scatrl. I'm I was when I got over the toothache—so scart for fear it would come back I was kind o' miserable."

Mr. Peasley came out of the door. He was a big, full-bearded, jovial man.

"I've got a small load o' hay for you," said Samson.

"I was expecting it, though I supposed 'twould be watkin'—in the dark o' night," Peasley answered. "Drive in on the barn floor."

When Samson had driven into the barn its doors were closed and the negroes were called from their places of hiding. Samson writes:

"I never realized what a blessing it is to be free until I saw that scared man and woman crawling out from under the dusty hay and shaking themselves like a pair of dogs. The weather was not cold or I guess they would have been frozen. They knelt together on the barn floor and the woman prayed for God's protection through the day. Peasley brought food for them and stowed them away on the top of his haymow with a pair of buffalo skins. I suppose they got some sleep there. I went into the house to breakfast and while I ate Brimstead told me about his trip. His children were there. They looked clean and decent. He lived in a log cabin a little further up the road. Mrs. Peasley's sister waited on me. She is a fat and cheerful looking lady, very light complexioned. Her hair is red—like tomato ketchup. Looks to me like a likely, stout-armed, good-hearted woman who can do a lot of hard work. She can see a lot of trouble in the world from puddings that taste good but don't do good.

They "eat" well, but that ends the recommendation.

Practical Bible Warning.

"There are extraordinary coincidences," says Alexander Black, author of "The Seventh Angel" and "The Great Desire." "One night a thief made off with my overcoat from a restaurant. It was not the sort of restaurant in which one is admonished to be alert. Moreover, I had never been robbed of anything in my life. I had had no admittance experience. Naturally the incident made a rather profound impression. The weather deepened that impression."

"That same night I happened to open my Bible to verify the location of the verse from which I took the title of 'The Seventh Angel.' And in the verse immediately preceding I read these startling words: 'Blessed is he that watcheth and keepeth his commandments.'

OLD RESIDENT CLAIMED BY DEATH.

Mrs. Archie McNeven, estimable Old Lady succumbed to illness.

At 12:30 o'clock Monday afternoon, occurred the death of Mrs. Archie McNeven, at the home of her youngest son Peter McNeven in this city. The demise of this estimable old lady marks the passing of one of Grayling's oldest residents, and a life of usefulness has come to a close. In February of last year Mrs. McNeven contracted influenza and since then has been ailing. At 6:30 o'clock last Friday night she suffered an attack of paralysis and altho in a feeble condition, knew her husband and children and understood everything that was said to her up to the last moment.

Mary Jane Alexander was born in Richmond, New York, October 19, 1846. When a young girl ten years old, she with her parents moved to Dryden, Mich., and later to Goodland, Mich. At the latter place the young lady met and was united in marriage to Mr. Archie McNeven. Five children came to gladden their home, four of whom survive, one daughter, Mrs. Kate Bushaw, passing away a number of years ago. The family resided in Goodland until 1884, when they came to Grayling to reside. Mr. McNeven was interested in the lumber industry and also in farming and he with his helpmate watched over little village grow each year with pride. Mrs. McNeven at the time of her death was nearing the four score mark and would have celebrated her 75th birthday anniversary on the 19th day of this month. They had always called Grayling their home altho for the past twelve years they had spent their winters in Flint with their daughter, Mrs. Frank Smith, coming to Grayling each summer to visit their sons and their families. Mrs. McNeven like many more of our faithful aged ladies, during the recent war labored unceasingly with her knitting needles making warm sweatshirts, socks and wristlets for the Red Cross to be sent to our boys overseas. In fact, during her whole life, her hands were never idle. Her life's work is done and with her loved ones she has left pleasant memories. Her death has caused deep sorrow for her husband, who is nearing the age of 85 years.

Their married life had been one of sincere happiness, they sharing equally in each other's joys and sorrows. Other than the husband one daughter, Mrs. Frank Smith of Flint, and three sons, William E., James and Peter M. of this city survive.

Rev. C. E. Doty of the Michelson Memorial church officiated at the services, which were held at the home of Peter McNeven yesterday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock. A choir rendered many pleasing hymns during the service. Those from out of the city, who came to be in attendance at the funeral of the deceased were Mr. and Mrs. Frank Smith of Flint, Mr. William McNeven and Mrs. E. Mitchell of Gaylord.

HOME TOWN PAPER WEEK.

Nation-Wide Movement Set for November 7-12.

Every Four Corners has its Home Town week now-days, but all the boys and girls who have wandered to the Township Center cannot get back to enjoy the loved surroundings. But all can subscribe to the old homeworn paper and thus keep well in touch with the little spot they once called home.

What joy to run over the school promotions and find that the tots of a few years ago are moving higher and higher in scholastic circles and eventually blossom forth as the "sweet girl graduates" or the clear strong boys discarding knickers.

Just watch that hardened old city codger open up his home paper—it is the first thing he picks up out of his bunch of mail—and what can he find there to interest him? Angus McGugan's horse died yesterday; Peter McGregor will run for the county clerkship; Horace Jell hopes to win the secretaryship of the Hiltown agricultural society; Lydia Munroe, has opened a millinery store in one side of the printing office; Mrs. Brown lost her hand satchel in the butchery; Dr. Dorland is attending Clara Grown who is down with a severe cold; Mrs. Plater broke her ankle and is in the county hospital.

Yet though he smiles at the oldtime styles and expressions he enjoys it all over and over again, for it takes his mind back home where his wonderful boyhood days—happy days—were spent.

GRAND CHANCELLOR VISITS GRAYLING PYTHIANS.

The members of Portage Lodge Knights of Pythias enjoyed a visit from Grand Chancellor C. W. Lasher, of Plainwell at their meeting Wednesday night.

The latter arrived on the afternoon train from Bay City and was entertained until evening by Chancellor Emil Giegling, and was shown some of the interesting attractions about the city. There was a fairly good attendance in the evening, when the first rank was conferred upon Julius Jones.

At the close of the meeting the Grand Chancellor gave a fine address, telling what the order was doing and of some of the things that are being done by other lodges about the state, and of some of the future plans of the order. He informed the members that after January 1, 1922, they must increase their membership fee to $25.00. The fee is now $15.00.

He warmly complimented Grayling lodge for the fine personnel of their membership and for the excellent work the lodge is doing, and especially commended them on the generosity of the lodge in supporting two French war orphans.

A luncheon and smoker were enjoyed in the banquet room, and some interesting talks by some of the members.

TEACHERS INSTITUTE NEXT MONDAY AND TUESDAY.

The annual meetings of the Crawford county school officers and Teachers' Institute will be held at the school house in this city beginning next Monday and ending Tuesday afternoon.

Monday forenoon will be devoted to a joint meeting of the school officers and teachers. The principal topics on the program are addressed by B. J. Ford, assistant superintendent of public instruction of Lansing, on school law; and by E. E. Gallup, state supervisor of agricultural education, on consolidation of schools.

In the afternoon of the same day, Mr. Ford will talk on "The relationship of the teacher to the community." Mr. Gallup will speak on "American spirit in the public schools."

Tuesday Mr. Ford will speak on "Agriculture in its relation to the curriculum," "Factors in success and failure of teachers" will be the subject of an address by Mr. Gallup.

Tuesday afternoon Mr. Gallup will speak on "Teaching of arithmetic," Mr. Ford will speak on "Community building."

All school officers in the county should attend these meetings. Also the public will be cordially welcomed.

CARD OF THANKS.

We wish to express our appreciation to friends and neighbors, who so kindly assisted and for the beautiful flowers during our bereavement.

A Remarkable Record.

Chamberlain's Cough Remedy has remarkable record. It has been in use for colds, croup and whooping cough for at least half a century and is constantly grown in favor and popularity and its good qualities become better known. It is the standard and main reliance for these diseases in thousands of homes. The fact that it can always be depended upon and is safe and pleasant to take greatly in its favor when it is called for.

Lake Belches and Pickles From Last Green Tomatoes.

In autumn after the canning is over there is often a surplus of unpeeled tomatoes; cabbage, onions, and green peppers, too, are usually plentiful at this season, and help to make good mixed pickle. They can be used in relatively equal proportions, except onion. Half as much onion as any other ingredient is usually best. The United States department of Agriculture has tested this recipe.

Chopped Pickle.

1 gallon green tomatoes.
1 gallon of cabbage.
2 gallon of onions.
2 large green peppers.

Put all together in a vessel, cover with water, add one pint of salt, and let stand over night. In the morning put it all in a bag and drain thoroughly. After draining add 1 pint of white mustard seed. In a separate vessel boil 1 gallon of vinegar with 1½ pounds of brown sugar. When boiling hot, pour over the chopped vegetables. Put all on the stove together and cook about 15 minutes. Put in jars and seal while hot.

Many persons like spices in a chopped pickle.

Green Tomato Pickle.

1 gallon green tomatoes,
½ dozen large onions,
3 cups brown sugar,
½ lemon.

3 cups of red pepper.

3 cups vinegar.
1 tablespoon whole black pepper.

1 tablespoonful whole cloves.

1 tablespoonful whole allspice.

1 tablespoon celery seed (crushed).

1 tablespoon mustard seed.

1 tablespoon ground mustard.

Slice the tomatoes and onions thin. Sprinkle over them one-half cup of salt and let stand over night in a rock or enameled vessel. Tie the pepper, cloves, all spice, and celery seed in a cheesecloth bag. Slice the lemon and chop two pepper pods very fine. Drain the tomato and onion well. Add all seasoning except one pepper pod to the vinegar, then add the tomato and onion. Cook for one-half hour, stirring gently at intervals to prevent burning. Remove spice bag to prevent darkening product. Pack in jar and garnish with slender strips of the red pepper, placing them vertically on the opposite side of each jar. Process for 15 minutes.

Another use for green tomatoes is mock mincemeat which will be relished in winter pies.

ONE BRAND ONE QUALITY One Size Package

All our skill, facilities, and lifelong knowledge of the finest tobaccos are concentrated on this one cigarette—CAMEL.

Into this ONE BRAND, we put the utmost quality. Nothing is too good for Camels. They are as good as it's possible to make a cigarette.

Camel QUALITY is always maintained at the same high, exclusive standard. You can always depend on the same mellow-mild, refreshing smoothness—the taste and rich flavor of choicest tobaccos—and entire freedom from cigarette aftertaste.

And remember this! Camels come in one size package only—20 cigarettes—just the right size to make the greatest saving in production and packing. This saving goes straight into Camel Quality. That's one reason why you can get Camel Quality at so moderate a price.

Here's another. We put no useless frills on the Camel package. No "extra wrappings!" Nothing just for show!

Such things do not improve the smoke any more than premiums or coupons. And their added cost must go onto the price or come out of the quality.

One thing, and only one, is responsible for Camels great and growing popularity—that is CAMEL QUALITY.

Studebaker

LIGHT-SIX TOURING CAR NOW $1150

This is a Studebaker Year

The car that is converting thousands to the SIX

The popularity of the six-cylinder automobile is universal. Everyone admits that there is great pleasure in driving a Six, and the six-cylinder motor is now recognized as the most satisfactory unit of power.

The Studebaker LIGHT-SIX motor embodies the most advanced engineering developments—

—it is powerful. Its 40-horsepower motor supplies much more than the usual power per pound of car weight.

From the first moment you sit behind the wheel you get that velvety feeling of a strong, continuous flow of overlapping power impulses.

—it picks up quickly and smoothly, affording a quick getaway in traffic; it throttles down to a snail's pace in high gear.

See this car—drive it—test it. You will be won by it. You will understand why it is the Studebaker ideal of what a light, six-cylinder car should be.

TEACHING THROUGH PLAY

Is there a kindergarten in your community?

No? Then why not practice kindergarten principles in your own home? I do not mean by this that you must sit down and devote every second for three hours to your children. But teach your child while you are about your work. Teach him through play.

Today play is considered a great factor in education. "Play is the expression of awakening instincts." Watch your little girl with her doll. The doll is her baby, and she is its mother. Through this play she is developing the instinct of mother love. Watch your little boy playing store or fireman. He, too, is preparing for future manhood. Let us then teach through play.

It is an acknowledged fact that the kindergarten gives a child certain advantages by cultivating self confidence, the power of observation, originality of thought and other qualities.

Let us see if it is not possible for the mother to develop similar characteristics at home.

First, Self-confidence: If the child asks to help with the dishes, make the bed, or perform other little tasks, do not be too busy to listen to the request. Accept the offer of assistance with thanks, even if the work takes longer or needs to be done over. Remember this is one of the ways of developing self-confidence and helpfulness. Discouragement will not cultivate self-confidence.

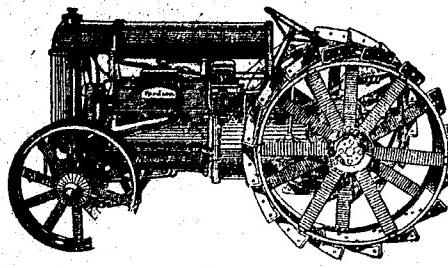

Second, Ability to memorize and think: Children love anything rhythmic, whether the words are understood or not. Repeat or sing nursery rhymes and jingles to the children. Soon they will be repeating and singing them after you. Find the time during the day to read or tell them stories. Every child loves a story, especially if acted out.

Third, Love of Nature: When out for walks teach the children about the trees, flowers, and birds. Nature can be known and loved in the parks of the city, as well as in the woods and fields of the country. And reading nature stories supplements the firsthand knowledge children are gaining, thus adding to their interest and appreciation.

Fourth, Observation: This can be cultivated by giving a child magazines, calling his attention to the different pictures and pointing out every detail. Then as he studies for himself, not one thing in a picture, no matter how small, will escape his eye. And he will become observant not only of pictures but of everything else about him.

Fifth, Originality: With blocks, the sandpile or plasticine, (the latter can be purchased at stores carrying school supplies) a child can be instructed in the making of various objects. Soon he will branch out for himself, doing really creative work.

Fordson Tractor Economy

Following is a copy of a letter received from a Fordson owner who purchased a tractor at Scottville, Michigan:

KOBE & SMITH,

Dear Sirs:—I am mailing you cost figures for operating the Fordson tractor, plowing 80 acres for the year 1920; also showing the difference plowing 50 acres with horses for the year 1919.
